"New Orleans was the birthplace of jazz," George Buck asserts. "Other places in the South they didn't allow the slaves to play drums because they were afraid that they might send messages, you see, for a revolt. In New Orleans, just like it is today, everything goes. You have dances, you have Congo Square where everything started." George H. Buck, Jr. runs a non-profit association that maintains a collection of early jazz recordings. Listen to five tunes from the early days of jazz and read one New Orleanian's thoughts on the origins of jazz. His love of music and his love of his hometown shine through.

Among inductees of the National Inventors Hall of Fame, his name comes alphabetically after Louis Pasteur. In the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame, it follows Parliament-Funkadelic. This singular distinction belongs to Les Paul, whose insatiable curiosity and experiments gave us the musical instrument of the modern era -- the solid-body electric guitar -- and the predominant studio recording technique -- multi-tracking. Audacious and indefatigable at every turn of his career -- from small-town Waukesha to Harlem music haunts to Hollywood studios -- Paul, at age 92, still holds court every Monday night at the Iridium Jazz Club in New York City. AMERICAN MASTERS explores the revolutionary results of his drive to create sounds that had "never been heard on earth."

In 1941, during the Nazi occupation of Paris, the Gestapo visited Pablo Picasso's Left Bank flat, where a member of the secret police spied a postcard of the artist's most famous work, Guernica. The giant mural memorialized Germany's 1937 aerial obliteration of a small Basque village. "Was it you who did this?" the Nazi demanded of Picasso, to which he replied, "No. It was you." In the eight-part SIMON SCHAMA'S POWER OF ART, internationally acclaimed scholar and writer Simon Schama recounts that story while challenging viewers with a typically provocative query: "Shouldn't art just stick to what it does best, the delivery of pleasure, and forget about being a paintbrush warrior? Or is it, when the bombs are dropping, that we find out what art is really for?"

A California Assemblywoman's personal environmental mission to reduce auto emissions inspired her colleagues to act and other states to follow suit. Supported by favorable federal court decisions, encouraged by Governor Arnold Schwarzenegger, and armed with new laws, her state is now on the cutting edge of efforts to reduce the carbon footprint of everything from American power plants to automobiles. This week NOW investigates not only California's aggressive stance against global warming, but also strong political opposition standing in the way of its expansion. Are California and the Environmental Protection Agency headed for a showdown?

Edward Osborne Wilson grew up off the gulf coast of Alabama and Florida, becoming fascinated at a very early age by the diversity of the natural world surrounding him. After blinding himself in one eye while fishing at the age of 7, Wilson explains that he no longer was very good at bird-watching, so decided to "turn towards the little things in life," namely ants. At 13, he discovered the first U.S. colony of fire ants near the docks of Mobile, Alabama, well on his way to becoming one of the country's foremost myrmecologists (ant biologists), discovering the ways intricate chemical signals affect colony behavior. While a professor at Harvard, Wilson used his insect expertise as the basis for larger study into animal and human behavior, releasing in 1975, SOCIOBIOLOGY: THE NEW SYNTHESIS, advancing Darwin's study of evolution into the realm of behavior.

With the Federal government's increasing reliance on private corporations for military and intelligence projects, many government contractors have already become household names -- but there is a multi-billion dollar company, one that has received more private government contracts than any other, that you've probably never heard of: Science Applications International Corporation. SAIC, as it is known, has a workforce of 44,000, annual revenues that reached $8 billion in 2006, and a list of current and former board members that reads like a who's who of political and military heavyweights. In a story for VANITY FAIR, the venerable investigative team of Donald L. Barlett and James B. Steele pull back the curtain of government contracting to reveal that even though "several of SAIC's biggest projects have turned out to be colossal failures," in the end, the company always manages to get paid.

A public opinion poll from the American Research Group recently reported that more than four in ten Americans -- 45% -- favor impeachment hearings for President Bush and more than half -- 54% -- favored impeachment for Vice President Cheney. Unhappiness about the war in Iraq isn't the only cause of the unsettled feelings of the electorate. Recent events like President Bush's pardoning of Scooter Libby, the refusal of Vice President Cheney's office to surrender emails under subpoena to Congress and the President's prohibition of testimony of former White House counsel Harriet E. Miers in front of the House Judiciary Committee have caused unease over claims of "executive privilege." In addition, many of the White House anti-terror initiatives and procedures -- from the status of "enemy combatants" in Guantanamo to warrantless wiretapping -- have come under legal scrutiny in Congress and the courts. Bill Moyers gets perspective on the role of impeachment in American political life from Constitutional scholar Bruce Fein, who wrote the first article of impeachment against President Bill Clinton, and THE NATION's John Nichols, author of THE GENIUS OF IMPEACHMENT.

A California Assemblywoman's personal environmental mission to reduce auto emissions inspired her colleagues to act and other states to follow suit. Supported by favorable federal court decisions, encouraged by Governor Arnold Schwarzenegger, and armed with new laws, her state is now on the cutting edge of efforts to reduce the carbon footprint of everything from American power plants to automobiles. This week NOW investigates not only California's aggressive stance against global warming, but also strong political opposition standing in the way of its expansion. Are California and the Environmental Protection Agency headed for a showdown?

Welcome to Colorado and the Annual Aspen Ideas Festival. The 2008 elections are off to a roaring start. Our political roundtable looks at the state of the campaign tonight on "Washington Week." Eighteen candidates running for president, all fighting to get to this. But first they have to raise the millions. Gov. Mitt Romney (R-MA): (From tape.) "You're going to have to do what's necessary." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL): (From tape.) "We've got 250,000 people who have donated to our campaign." And they have to survive the debates. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ): (From tape.) "I don't want to be president of a failed nation." And the campaign trail. Sen. John Edwards (D-NC): (From tape.) "It's time for a different kind of leadership in this country." And YouTube. Is this any way to elect a president? President Bill Clinton: (From tape.) "No onion rings?" Sen. Hillary Clinton: (From tape.) "I'm looking out for you." We ask that question tonight to four of the nation's top reporters: Dan Balz of the "Washington Post," John Dickerson of "Slate" magazine, Martha Raddatz of "ABC News," and Alexis Simendinger of "National Journal."

Talk about Murphy's Law, on Iraq policy and for John McCain almost nothing went right this week. We'll talk about it tonight on "Washington Week." President George W. Bush: Well, I can fully understand why people are tired of the war. The question they have is, can we win it? But the president is resolute, Congress is fractious, and a new report on progress in Iraq falls short. Sen. Joseph Biden (D-DE): We continue to send out kids in the middle of a meat-grinder based on a policy that is fundamentally flawed. Sen. Lindsay Graham (R-SC): If you think this war is lost, stop the funding. Bring the troops home with honor. Stop this game of trying to play politics to put Republicans in boxes which will result in people coming back in boxes. The very recipe for political and policy gridlock. What happens next in Iraq? What can happen next? We assess the situation in Washington and on the ground. Plus, the political collapse of Republican senator John McCain: out of money and out of staff. Is he also out of time? Covering these stories this week: Peter Baker of the "Washington Post," Michael Viqueira of NBC News, James Kitfield of "National Journal," and Gloria Borger of "U.S. News and World Report."

John James Audubon - whose name became synonymous with American conservation - killed thousands of birds during his quest to create Birds of America, arguably the largest and most beautiful book of the 19th century. Audubon was at once entrepreneur, artist, scientist, husband, father, legend - and walking contradiction. Born in what is now Haiti, the illegitimate son of a French plantation owner and his mistress, Audubon ultimately became the quintessential American pioneer. On the frontier, he played the debonair European. In the drawing rooms of Europe, he acted the part of wild woodsman. Although faithful to his long-suffering wife, he nonetheless wrote her lengthy letters bursting with details of his encounters with other women. Jailed once for bankruptcy, he went on to dine at the White House. The self-taught artist and self-made man was praised by royalty, shunned by his in-laws and blackballed by the Philadelphia Academy of Natural Sciences. AMERICAN MASTERS "John James Audubon: Drawn From Nature," details Audubon's epic adventures while capturing the full-scale beauty of his definitive book.

The Yes Men are Andy Bichlbaum and Mike Bonanno, two impersonators who use satire to bring media attention to issues that otherwise might be overlooked. "We actually see this as a form of journalism. Or perhaps more precisely, the form of collaboration of journalists," explains Bichlbaum in his interview with Bill Moyers. "A lot of the issues that we address journalists want to cover. But...in many situations, editorial control won't let them unless there's a good little hook behind it. And so, we've found a way to create funny spectacles that give journalists the excuse to cover issues." The Yes Men have impersonated representatives from Halliburton, Dow Chemical, Exxon, and others, giving public presentations aimed at exposing what they believe to be discrepancies between how these groups want to be seen and how they really act. They call this process, "identity correction." While some criticize them for deception and call their hijinx unethical, they argue "these kinds of [corporate and political] wrongdoings are at such a scale - they're so vast compared to our white lies that we think it's ethical."

For thousands of residents living alongside industrial plants in Southeast Texas, the odors, dust and noise in the air were clear signs the plants were polluting the environment. But no one ever bothered to tell them exactly what they were breathing until the HOUSTON CHRONICLE published its series of investigative articles called "In Harm's Way." The CHRONICLE's testing confirmed that "air toxics," including known human carcinogens, were being emitted into local communities. At the same time, the paper reported, Texas's guidelines for regulating such toxics were among the most lenient and vague in the country. EXPOSÉ details the CHRONICLE investigation that put a human face on the issues of industrial pollution and regulation.

The Miami real estate market has been booming, but that growth has left some residents out in the cold. With an innovative tax on commercial real estate transactions, money was flowing into the Miami-Dade Housing Agency, the body charged with building affordable housing. But there was a problem. A lot of money was going out. But not a lot of houses were being built. In an investigation one editor described as a "bomb going off in the city," reporter Debbie Cenziper went inside the agency's own records, interviewed dozens of residents and hunted down the money to expose the mismanagement, pet projects, and special favors taking place at the expense of the very people the agency was supposed to serve.

In the 1990s, at the height of the prison-building boom, a prison opened in rural America every 15 days. "Prison Town, USA" tells the story of Susanville, one California town that tries to resuscitate its economy by building a prison - with unforeseen consequences. Weaving the stories of a laid-off mill worker turned guard, a struggling dairy owner and an inmate's family stranded in Susanville, the film illuminates the legacy of an industry that is transforming rural America. Directors/producers/writers: Katie Galloway and Po Kutchins. Co-production with Independent Television Service (ITVS) and KQED/Truly California.

The Miami real estate market has been booming, but that growth has left some residents out in the cold. With an innovative tax on commercial real estate transactions, money was flowing into the Miami-Dade Housing Agency, the body charged with building affordable housing. But there was a problem. A lot of money was going out. But not a lot of houses were being built. In an investigation one editor described as a "bomb going off in the city," reporter Debbie Cenziper went inside the agency's own records, interviewed dozens of residents and hunted down the money to expose the mismanagement, pet projects, and special favors taking place at the expense of the very people the agency was supposed to serve.

How do we get out of Iraq and if we do, does the terror threat grow or diminish? That plus why money matters on the campaign trail and on Wall Street tonight on "Washington Week." In Washington and Baghdad it's all about the clock. Senator George Voinovich (R-OH) said, "What are you doing to let them know that this time is running out? The time is running out." Republicans want to get out of Iraq. Democrats want to get out of Iraq, but the president and the generals say "give us just a little more time." LIEUTENANT GENERAL ODIERNO said, "I'm hoping that this will continue over the next two to three months, another reason why as we give our assessment in September it's important that we have a bit more time so we can do evaluation of this progress." But is when the right question? What about how and who? Is al Qaeda the threat it's cracked up to be? A new intelligence report says yes, but Iraq may not be the biggest problem. On the campaign trail, we follow the money and the candidates raising it. What do the dollars tell us about what kind of president they would be? Governor Bill Richardson said, "This election should not be on who the biggest celebrity is or who has the most money or who's the biggest rock star, although I'm working on that." And on Wall Street only good news, so why is this guy so down beat? Covering the week, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, Mark Mazzetti of the New York Times, Jeanne Cummings of The Politico, and David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal.

This year, Back to School checks in on the students, now in third grade, some with their future education almost assured and others clearly in danger of dropping out. Like Michael Apted's 7-Up film series, Wide Angle will periodically visit these children through 2015 to update the events of their lives and their progress. How many will successfully graduate? How many will drop out, and why? What differences will we see between the boys and the girls? These children's stories will offer rich insight to American audiences about the striking disparities of circumstance and opportunity in different countries around the world.

For thousands of residents living alongside industrial plants in Southeast Texas, the odors, dust and noise in the air were clear signs the plants were polluting the environment. But no one ever bothered to tell them exactly what they were breathing until the HOUSTON CHRONICLE published its series of investigative articles called "In Harm's Way." The CHRONICLE's testing confirmed that "air toxics," including known human carcinogens, were being emitted into local communities. At the same time, the paper reported, Texas's guidelines for regulating such toxics were among the most lenient and vague in the country. EXPOSÉ details the CHRONICLE investigation that put a human face on the issues of industrial pollution and regulation.

The story seen in the national press went like this: A decade earlier, a writer eating in a Chinese restaurant in Manhattan spotted a diamondback terrapin turtle in a tank, about to be chopped up for soup. The horrified writer, Richard Ogust, stopped the execution, bought the turtle for 20 bucks and installed her in a tank at home, naming her "The Empress." And that started him on a quest to save the world's endangered turtles, to which he devoted ever more of his time and resources. When the national and international media found him, Ogust was portrayed as a somewhat eccentric figure sharing a Manhattan penthouse with 1,200 turtles, including several species extinct in the wild. It became an "only in New York" moment in the entertainment firmament.

John James Audubon - whose name became synonymous with American conservation - killed thousands of birds during his quest to create Birds of America, arguably the largest and most beautiful book of the 19th century. Audubon was at once entrepreneur, artist, scientist, husband, father, legend - and walking contradiction. Born in what is now Haiti, the illegitimate son of a French plantation owner and his mistress, Audubon ultimately became the quintessential American pioneer. On the frontier, he played the debonair European. In the drawing rooms of Europe, he acted the part of wild woodsman. Although faithful to his long-suffering wife, he nonetheless wrote her lengthy letters bursting with details of his encounters with other women. Jailed once for bankruptcy, he went on to dine at the White House. The self-taught artist and self-made man was praised by royalty, shunned by his in-laws and blackballed by the Philadelphia Academy of Natural Sciences. AMERICAN MASTERS "John James Audubon: Drawn From Nature," details Audubon's epic adventures while capturing the full-scale beauty of his definitive book.

One of the most admired women of our time, Lady Bird Johnson occupied the White House as First Lady from 1963 to 1968, leaving a lasting legacy to the American landscape. As a conservationist and founder of the national movement for beautification, and as the wife of the 37th President of the United States, Mrs. Johnson profoundly influenced public policy in many areas. This film tells the story of a young women growing up in a remote town in Texas, marrying and sharing life with one of the most powerful and complex men in American politics and emerging with her own identity.

Four years ago on May 1, President Bush landed on the aircraft carrier USS Lincoln wearing a flight suit and delivered a speech in front of a giant "Mission Accomplished" banner. He was hailed by media stars as a "breathtaking" example of presidential leadership in toppling Saddam Hussein. Despite profound questions over the failure to locate weapons of mass destruction and the increasing violence in Baghdad, many in the press confirmed the White House's claim that the war was won. MSNBC's Chris Matthews declared, "We're all neo-cons now;" NPR's Bob Edwards said, "The war in Iraq is essentially over;" and Fortune magazine's Jeff Birnbaum said, "It is amazing how thorough the victory in Iraq really was in the broadest context."

According to the recent National Intelligence Estimate, a collaborative document reflecting the knowledge-base of the U.S. Intelligence community: "Al Qaeda is and will remain the most serious threat to the Homeland, as it's central leadership continues to plan high-impact plots, while pushing others in extreme Sunni communities to mimic its efforts and to supplement its capabilities." And President Bush seemed to echo this sentiment when, at a recent speech in West Virginia about our mission in Iraq, he evoked the name "al Qaeda" 27 times. "Many of the spectacular car bombings and killings you see are as a result of al Qaeda - the very same folks that attacked us on September 11th." But how strong truly is the connection between the central al Qaeda network of Osama bin Laden and al Qaeda in Iraq? Some experts argue that the war on terror, with global al Qaeda at its center as the recent NIE tells us, has little to do with the sectarian war in Iraq, and that our presence there and current tactics have actually worked to bolster al Qaeda's position in the world.

Amid the stacks at the Wesleyan University Library, a student has found a book emblazoned with the name and address of the legendary anarchist Lucy Parsons. The biracial black and Native American activist fought in the late 1800s for the rights of the poor and disenfranchised in the face of an increasingly oppressive industrial economic system. Did this once-feared radical own the manifesto? If so, it would pose a mystery: after Parsons died, police supposedly raided her house and confiscated all of her subversive literature. So how did this book elude them? History Detectives explores a major labor movement uprising and Parsons' abiding acts of defiance.

The Senate is set to soon vote on the Matthew Shepard Act, which would expand the coverage of federal hate crimes to include violent attacks against homosexuals. In a NOW web-exclusive interview, Judy Shepard, whose gay son Matthew was beaten to death in 1998, urges passage of the bill. "The America that I grew up believing in says that everyone is equal under the law," Shepard tells NOW Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa. If the Senate approves the measure, which cleared the House in March, President Bush is expected to veto it. "It's very disheartening when the leader of our nation goes on national TV and says that gay people aren't deserving of every equality everyone else [has]," Shepard tells Senior Correspondent Maria Hinojosa.

How do we get out of Iraq and if we do, does the terror threat grow or diminish? That plus why money matters on the campaign trail and on Wall Street tonight on "Washington Week." In Washington and Baghdad it's all about the clock. Senator George Voinovich (R-OH) said, "What are you doing to let them know that this time is running out? The time is running out." Republicans want to get out of Iraq. Democrats want to get out of Iraq, but the president and the generals say "give us just a little more time." LIEUTENANT GENERAL ODIERNO said, "I'm hoping that this will continue over the next two to three months, another reason why as we give our assessment in September it's important that we have a bit more time so we can do evaluation of this progress." But is when the right question? What about how and who? Is al Qaeda the threat it's cracked up to be? A new intelligence report says yes, but Iraq may not be the biggest problem. On the campaign trail, we follow the money and the candidates raising it. What do the dollars tell us about what kind of president they would be? Governor Bill Richardson said, "This election should not be on who the biggest celebrity is or who has the most money or who's the biggest rock star, although I'm working on that." And on Wall Street only good news, so why is this guy so down beat? Covering the week, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, Mark Mazzetti of the New York Times, Jeanne Cummings of The Politico, and David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal.

Clive James was born in Sydney, Australia in 1939, where he was raised by his mother after his father was killed in a plane crash returning from a Japanese POW camp during World War II. He sailed to Britain in 1961 where he attended Cambridge University, excelling in numerous extracurricular activities, including ascending to the Presidency of Footlights, a popular comedy troupe. In Britain, he soon gained esteem as a television critic for THE OBSERVER, for which he wrote for 10 years, until venturing into the television world himself. In 1993, he released FAME IN THE TWENTIETH CENTURY, a PBS series examining film and television stars in the last 100 years, and in 1995, he brought us his innovative travel series, POSTCARDS. Despite television notoriety in Britain, James maintained his work in the literary medium, writing more than 20 books, essays and portraits in the coming years. His most recent collection of biographical essays, CULTURAL AMNESIA, which took him 40 years to accumulate, covers 106 cultural figures stretching from Duke Ellington to Adolph Hitler, all of whom James believes are most worthy of being remembered by generations to come.

The 1960s were years of change, experimentation and hope that transformed a nation. This two-hour film chronicles this era of widespread democratic activism and provocative music, focusing on critical events, from civil rights to the women's liberation movement, the youth counter-culture and the Vietnam War. Through film footage, rare archival photographs and interviews with historians, critics, participants and those on both sides of the generation gap, the documentary captures the electricity, fervor and anger of an era full of great hope and turmoil. And it reflects on the enormous changes that swept the globe during that time and profiles the coming of age of the baby boomers.

In America, the top one-tenth of one percent of earners make about the same money per year collectively as the millions of Americans in the bottom fifty percent combined. This is putting a tight squeeze on the middle class, while leaving millions of others in the cold. David Brancaccio talks with Pulitzer prize-winning financial reporter David Cay Johnston, as well as author and advocate Beth Shulman about the state of our country's vast income divide and how it's hurting those just trying to make ends meet.

Gold Futures is a David-and-Goliath story set in a scenic Romanian village in the heart of Transylvania. At stake: Europe's largest deposit of gold ore - and a 2000-year-old village community that has existed since the ancient Romans found gold in the mountains. Now, as a Canadian company plans the largest open-pit gold mine in Europe, mineral wealth and badly-needed jobs compete with time-honored rural traditions and concerns about poisoning the environment. Set against the backdrop of Rosia Montana's misty forests, Gold Futures captures the unfolding conflict between villagers who welcome the company's buy-out offers and their neighbors who remain fiercely defensive of their way of life and anxious to maintain the stunning landscape of their homeland.

The economy is on the mind of the president, and so is the precarious position of Pakistan's leader. Plus, GOP politics in middle America. I'm Alexis Simendinger sitting in for Gwen Ifill. All this, tonight on Washington Week. The president heads for his summer vacation by drawing a few lines in the sand, about the economy - President George W. Bush said, "The American economy is the envy of the world and we need to keep it that way." - about Iraq - Pres. Bush said, "The fundamental question facing America is, is it worth it? Does it matter whether or not we stay? My answer is it does matter." and about a looming battle with Congress in the fall. Pres. Bush said "The bill Congress sent to my desk leaves some of the key priorities unfulfilled." Is it the calm before the autumn storm for the commander-in-chief? Pres. Bush said, "Put up your dukes." He's a key ally in the fight against terrorism and a nuclear player too, but could Pervez Musharraf's days be numbered? And if so, what could that mean for the United States? And all eyes are on Iowa this week for an early GOP test of organization and support. A look at the national frontrunner - Mayor Rudolph Giuliani (R-NY) said, "A description of my mistakes in 30 seconds?" - and how his northeast urban sensibilities are playing in the heartland. Plus, the topsy-turvy primary calendar takes another twist. Could voting for campaign '08 actually start in 2007? Covering these stories this week: Peter Baker of the "Washington Post," Janine Zacharia of Bloomberg News, and Karen Tumulty of "TIME" magazine.

Teacher Rafe Esquith has a point of view - a very strong one - about educating children of immigrants. Teaching in Los Angeles at one of the nation's largest inner-city grade schools, Hobart Elementary, Esquith leads his class of fifth graders through an uncompromising curriculum of English, mathematics, geography and literature. He inspires them with cross-country trips to learn history firsthand. And at the end of the semester, every student performs in a full-length Shakespeare play: in this case Hamlet, with advice from actors Ian McKellen and Michael York. Despite language barriers and poverty, these "Hobart Shakespeareans" move on to attend outstanding colleges, motivated by a teacher honored with a National Medal of Arts.

America's Civil Rights Movement was the work of many people, but one name stands out: the Reverend Martin Luther King, Jr. His bold and courageous action opened the eyes of the nation to racial injustice. Coupled with President Lyndon B. Johnson's passionate politicking, the Voting Rights Act of 1965 became the law of the land. It added millions of blacks to voter rolls but Dr. King was a controversial man. Did his assassination mark the end of the Civil Rights Movement, or the start of a new era? What is the future of the black vote and will it be decisive in the 2006 and particularly the 2008 elections?

Washington's responsibilities, infrastructure at home, ethics at the Capitol, peace in the Middle East, and what the next president would do about it all, tonight on "Washington Week." Senator Obama's mixed signals. Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) Said, "If we have actionable intelligence about high-value terrorist targets and President Musharraf will not act, we will." He suggests he would attack a U.S. ally, but declares the use of nuclear weapons off the table. The second place Democrat makes waves. We look at why. And as the secretaries of state and defense make yet another trip to the Middle East - Secretary Of State Condoleezza Rice said, "There needs to be a renunciation of violence because you can't have one foot in the camp of terror and one foot in the camp of politics." - we are reminded why talking about foreign policy can be so much simpler than acting on it. While on Capitol Hill lawmakers take a big step toward fixing their own glass house with sweeping ethics reform. And a tragedy renews debate about what it will take to fix the nation's crumbling bridges. Sen. Amy Klobuchar (D-MN) said, "A bridge in America just shouldn't fall down." Covering the stories this week, Dan Balz of The Washington Post, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

The economy is on the mind of the president, and so is the precarious position of Pakistan's leader. Plus, GOP politics in middle America. I'm Alexis Simendinger sitting in for Gwen Ifill. All this, tonight on Washington Week. The president heads for his summer vacation by drawing a few lines in the sand, about the economy - President George W. Bush said, "The American economy is the envy of the world and we need to keep it that way." - about Iraq - Pres. Bush said, "The fundamental question facing America is, is it worth it? Does it matter whether or not we stay? My answer is it does matter." and about a looming battle with Congress in the fall. Pres. Bush said "The bill Congress sent to my desk leaves some of the key priorities unfulfilled." Is it the calm before the autumn storm for the commander-in-chief? Pres. Bush said, "Put up your dukes." He's a key ally in the fight against terrorism and a nuclear player too, but could Pervez Musharraf's days be numbered? And if so, what could that mean for the United States? And all eyes are on Iowa this week for an early GOP test of organization and support. A look at the national frontrunner - Mayor Rudolph Giuliani (R-NY) said, "A description of my mistakes in 30 seconds?" - and how his northeast urban sensibilities are playing in the heartland. Plus, the topsy-turvy primary calendar takes another twist. Could voting for campaign '08 actually start in 2007? Covering these stories this week: Peter Baker of the "Washington Post," Janine Zacharia of Bloomberg News, and Karen Tumulty of "TIME" magazine.

When Tom Siebel, a billionaire software developer and part time Montana resident, learned the devastating effect methamphetamine addiction was having on the big sky state, he decided to use his successful marketing techniques - and 20 million dollars from his own wallet - to "un-sell" the deadly and highly addictive drug. It's called the Montana Meth Project. NOW's David Brancaccio talks with the venture philanthropist about blitzing the state with stark and shocking ad campaigns designed to drag meth use out of the shadows and get into the faces of kids. The results are promising, and his idea is spreading around the country.

Gold Futures is a David-and-Goliath story set in a scenic Romanian village in the heart of Transylvania. At stake: Europe's largest deposit of gold ore - and a 2000-year-old village community that has existed since the ancient Romans found gold in the mountains. Now, as a Canadian company plans the largest open-pit gold mine in Europe, mineral wealth and badly-needed jobs compete with time-honored rural traditions and concerns about poisoning the environment. Set against the backdrop of Rosia Montana's misty forests, Gold Futures captures the unfolding conflict between villagers who welcome the company's buy-out offers and their neighbors who remain fiercely defensive of their way of life and anxious to maintain the stunning landscape of their homeland.

There's no question teens are overweight and don't get enough exercise. In this program, teen reporters point out the current and future dangers of an unhealthy lifestyle, such as heart disease, cancer and type 2 diabetes. To help viewers make smart choices, they give easy to use information about reading labels to check the fat and sugar in food; ways to exercise at home; how to change family habits; and much more. They also visit a school that makes nutrition and fitness part of the curriculum; and a Boys & Girls Club where middle school teens learn nutrition basics and fun activities. Through humor, surprising facts and compelling personal stories, teens and parents see how they can also gain more energy and self-esteem through a healthy lifestyle.

Nestled under the spectacular peaks of the Northern Rockies in Montana - as iconic a representation of America's "purple mountain majesties" as one can find - lies one of the country's worst cases of community poisoning from industrial pollution. In the small town of Libby, many hundreds of people are sick or have already died from exposure to asbestos, a notorious industrial toxin that many Americans would consider long banned or under control. "Libby, Montana" takes a long working day's journey into a blue-collar community and finds a different reality - one where the American Dream exacts a terrible price. The hurricane season of 2004 is categorized as one of the most active on record. It begins with an uneventful June and July then suddenly turns violent in August. Forecasters at the National Hurricane Center in Miami are confronted with satellite images showing a steady stream of tropical storms spinning across the Atlantic from Africa. Combining their experience with the latest technology they focus on making the most accurate predictions. As Hurricane Specialist Jack Bevens says, "If you get it wrong you can get a lot of people killed." No one wants to risk a wrong forecast. Anatomy of a Hurricane goes behind the scenes at the National Hurricane Center to see forecasters on a mission to save lives and property. It is a look at the stressful work of a dedicated staff as they track Charley, Frances, Ivan and Jeanne - all major hurricanes with unexpected challenges. It is also a look at the complicated dynamics of the atmosphere - why these hurricanes form and where they go.

They're the flood victims who were left behind --the tens of thousands of household pets separated from their owners in the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina. Now, in this special episode of Nature, we take you to the front lines of the battle to rescue these helpless animals -- before it's too late. We travel with animal rescue teams by small boat through the flooded streets of the devastated city, searching for survivors -- a dog stranded on a rooftop -- a kitten trapped in the branches of a tree -- all without food and water for days -- or weeks. With the odds against them, rescuers use any means necessary -- up to and including a National Guard tank -- to reach these animals in distress. We're there as they retrieve the animals, and then -- amazingly, amidst all the chaos and destruction -- reunite the lucky few with their owners. Along the way, we'll see what happened to the other animal inhabitants of New Orleans -- from the zoo and aquarium to the wildlife of Lake Pontchartrain. Witness the heroic efforts to save Katrina's animal victims -- on Nature.

In the fall of 2003, one of the largest recorded wildfires in California's history destroyed over 2,200 houses and killed fifteen people. Soon after, many who'd lost their homes had a rude awakening: their insurance did not nearly cover their losses as expected. The insurance industry, which claims to cover "more property, more lives, more liability-related risks than any time at history," is busy fighting allegations that customers are receiving smaller payouts than what they were promised. NOW collaborates with Bloomberg Markets magazine to investigate tactics some insurance companies may be using to reduce, avoid, or stall homeowners' claims in an effort to boost their own earnings.

War, terror, and politics: the stuff that keeps Washington humming even in August, tonight on "Washington Week." Terror suspect Jose Padilla guilty on all counts. Craig Morford [Acting U.S. Attorney General] said, "Cases like this one are central to the United States government's efforts to neutralize the threat posed by terrorists and those who support them." But what was Padilla, a U.S. citizen, found guilty of? A hint: it was not for plotting to set off dirty bombs. In Iraq at least 400 are killed in coordinated attacks far from Baghdad.

Major General Benjamin Mixon said, "This is an act of ethnic cleansing, if you will, almost genocide." Civil war or something completely different? And is there a political solution in sight? At home, the nation's most famous political consultant steps aside. President George W. Bush said "Karl Rove is moving on down the road." And the gloves come off in the presidential campaign. Senator Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "Apparently I must have struck a nerve." As Democrats and Republicans taken aim at the White House and at each other? Reality check at home, presidential candidates weigh in on the growing credit crisis. What would they do to solve it? The rise of the presidential spouse. Outspoken and invaluable: the women, and the man, who are saying the things the candidates won't. And the role of faith in presidential politics: a new book about the charismatic preacher who started it all. A senator disgraced, an attorney general quits, the primary crunch, and conflicting repots on Iraq, tonight on "Washington Week." A United States senator spiraling toward resignation. Sen. Larry Craig (R-ID), said "I did nothing wrong at the Minneapolis Airport." The five-day scandal about homosexuality, hypocrisy and guilt, and why Republicans are moving so fast to get past the embarrassment. An attorney general prepared to leave town as well. Attorney General Alberto Gonzales said,

"I have lived the American dream. Even my worst days as attorney general have been better than my father's best days." But his legacy and his actions remain under scrutiny. The primary clash: as state parties squeeze the voting calendar even more, will Iowa and New Hampshire still be first or will states like Florida and Michigan beat them to the punch? And a series of new reports and a new $50 billion price tag set the stage for yet another showdown over the war in Iraq. Latinos, this nation's largest and fastest-growing minority group, are big business. This program examines how efforts to profit from this group are shaping the contemporary Latino identity. The documentary, whose focal point is George Lopez, an icon and advocate for Latinos' move into the mainstream, offers rare behind-the-scenes access to Lopez' life and world as he shares his struggles to represent Latinos in a manner true to their realities and aspirations. As Cosby did for African Americans decades earlier, Lopez, through his comedy, aspires to normalize the image of Latinos in a way that delights and entertains. This program contrasts Lopez' endeavors with the efforts of marketers intent on spinning Latinos as a wholly distinct subculture.

The show also features conversations with members of the much-coveted Latino youth market, whose tastes and interests are far more eclectic than one would think.

You've begun your understanding and appreciation with our TV series. Now go further with the other elements of this comprehensive journey. COMMUNITY - Community carries with it many meanings in the world of craft. It is manifest in the social traditions passed from generation to generation. Or in a literal community of people, bound by geography or skill or place in time that comes together on a project, or to help one another. It is the give and take of academic communities where knowledge is exposed.

Abel, Cairo, and Kisura from the San Jose team begin their trip in LA, visiting Jan Robinson Flint, a social activist, who relates her story of growing up in Chicago during a time of tremendous social change and how this helped her discover her passion. She also dispels the belief that most people end up following the "American dream" and taking the straight path through college, marriage and career. The team then heads to Hollywood to interview actor and former teen idol, Joshua Jackson. Jackson offers advice about following passions, taking chances, and testing their character in order to feel a greater sense of accomplishment in what they do.

This episode begins with New York's Latino hip hop dance and culture, then travels to Miami and its unique Afro-Cuban sound, and ends in Los Angeles with modern dance pioneer Rudy Perez. The first segment documents the movement, history and culture of hip hop and looks at the new wave of Latinos who took hip hop and created a culture that revolutionized the genre. New York hip hop dancing couple Rokafella and Kwikstep are featured. The second segment highlights the Miami Sound, music that is a blend of traditional Cuban music, explosive jazz and American pop. The featured artist is Willie Chirino. Rudy Perez, whose story is uncovered in the third segment, is a pioneer of the Post-Modern Dance Movement. Though legally blind, he continues to create and inspire as teacher. Perez also choreographs for his Los Angeles-based Modern Dance Company.

The three-part series THE WRITING CODE examines the origin, history and craft of writing -- as both an art form and a science. Filmed in the U.S., England, Egypt, India and Iran, the programs explore writing systems from ancient Egyptian hieroglyphics to the Internet. The programs discuss literacy and the alphabet, and delve into how writing was first invented, how children learn to read and write, how Chinese writing works and what "digital" means. The series makes three major points: writing had to be invented; writing is different from speaking; and writing is the most important technology in human history.

The award-winning series Reading Rockets: Launching Young Readers is releasing a special half-hour companion show called Reading Rocks!, hosted by Disney Channel star Nick Spano. Reading Rocks! seeks to inspire children who are struggling to learn to read - along with their families and teachers. Often children who struggle with reading for a long time may lose hope. Reading Rocks! gathers together the voices of kids who have made it through those dark days, like Madeleine, age 8: "Sometimes I thought reading would destroy me." We hope children who feel like giving up will be motivated by the stories of kids like them -- kids who found a way to give reading another chance. Set to a hip hop soundtrack, Reading Rocks! features a kid author, a claymation movie, a Puerto Rican fifth grader who learned to speak English, and wacky fun with host Nick Spano. It also profiles the gigantic feet of kids' book author and illustrator Christopher Myers.

The first episode begins in New York, a city that is leading the charge to green its industrial skyline with several ground-breaking projects. New York combats the urban myth of the bustling city as a "concrete jungle." "The Green Apple" explores some of Manhattan's most prominent and technologically advanced structures like One Bryant Park and The Solaire, as well as the innovative minds behind them. The episode illustrates how the ubiquitous skyscraper can surprisingly be a model of environmental responsibility.

It is a visual wonderland, where imposing mountains rise almost two vertical miles above sprawling salt flats and canyons are painted in strokes of blue, pink, violet, and green from sunrise to sunset. This is Death Valley - one of the most inhospitable places on the planet. Nowhere else is a landscape so exquisite yet brutal, stunning yet harsh. Here, temperatures spike into the 130s, the earth cracks like broken clay, and when the hot wind blows, all you can taste is dust and salt. But, ironically, it is water that has shaped this super-arid home of true survivors.

As global warming turns up the heat, researchers are stunned to discover that our sun is actually growing dimmer. Increasing air pollution allows less and less sunlight to reach earth's surface, a 'global dimming' that disturbs rainfall patterns and is creates severe droughts. In an even more alarming twist, there is concern that recent success in solving the dimming problem is greatly accelerating global warming, melting ice caps and flooding coastal cities. NOVA examines a baffling climate conundrum and follows the disturbing implications of the discovery for our planet's future.

Six years later, a critical question continues to haunt America's national psyche: how could the most powerful nation on earth have been so utterly unprepared to protect its homeland? In "9/11: For the Record," a special one-hour analysis of the 9/11 Commission Report first broadcast in 2004, BILL MOYERS JOURNAL connects the dots of what happened that day and the warning signs leading up to it. The program highlights the agonizing close calls, missteps, and outright failures of two successive administrations and America's intelligence and security agencies in the months and years leading up to 9/11.

On the heels of a much-anticipated progress report in Washington, NOW travels to Iraq for an exclusive, hard look at the war through the telling eyes of U.S. soldiers on the ground, and of the families they left behind. We also examine first-hand the so-called "Anbar Awakening," a controversial partnership between U.S. soldiers and Sunni tribal leaders, many of whom had previously been fighting the Americans. Some-including President Bush-are calling this a significant step forward in reestablishing peace and order in Iraq. Hear what soldiers on the ground have to say. We first met the Third Infantry's First Brigade from Georgia's Fort Stewart in a NOW show broadcast last January, only weeks before they headed back to Iraq for the third deployment in four years. As the long months of the "surge" unfold, we see them fighting an elusive enemy that prefers roadside bombs to pitched battles, while back at home their newborns become toddlers, and birthdays and anniversaries come and go. With the personal and political effects of constant redeployment and re-strategizing apparent everywhere, are we at a turning point or a breaking point?

The war in Iraq assessed by the president, the generals, the diplomats, and the lawmakers, a turning point week tonight on "Washington Week." PRESIDENT GEORGE W. BUSH: The principle guiding my decisions on troop levels in Iraq is return on success. MS. IFILL: The president stakes his legacy on that one word: "success." PRES. BUSH: Strength and success. . . because of the success. . . military successes are paving the way. . . if the kind of success we're now seeing continues. MS. IFILL: And on the determination of his top general on the ground. GENERAL DAVID PETRAEUS: I'm not a pessimist or optimist at this point. I'm a realist about Iraq and Iraq is hard. MS. IFILL: But Democrats and Republicans alike are asking, how hard? SENATOR CHUCK HAGEL (R-NE): Are we going to continue to invest American blood and treasure at the same rate we're doing now? For what? The president said let's buy time. Buy time? For what? MS. IFILL: The presidential candidates are asking that, too. SENATOR BARACK OBAMA (D-IL): So let me be clear, there is no military solution in Iraq. There never was. SENATOR JOHN MCCAIN (R-AZ): Congress must not choose to lose in Iraq. I will do everything in my power to ensure that we do not. MS. IFILL: On the political front, Republicans may be losing ground in the Senate, while Democrats take a hit in a big money mystery that involves an arrest, tainted contributions, and a suicide note. Mexican artist Diego Rivera is credited with reintroducing classic renaissance fresco painting as part of the architecture of public buildings and spaces. He also inspired the WPA program which supported such artists as Jackson Pollock, Ben Shahn, and Arshile Gorky. During a series of visits to the United States in the 1930s, Rivera created major works in San Francisco, Detroit, and New York. This program examines these murals and the controversy that surrounded them. The program includes interviews with some of Rivera's assistants and friends, and art historians.

The daughter of a grocery store manager and a teacher in Canada, Joni Mitchell is now a U.S. citizen, a Buddhist, a poet and a painter, whose heroes are Miles Davis, Pablo Picasso, and Georgia O'Keeffe. Uncompromising and iconoclastic, Mitchell has confounded expectations at every turn -- wildly innovative, her music evolved from deeply personal folk into pop, jazz and avant-garde, prophetic of the multi-cultural experimentation of the '80s and '90s. Fiercely independent, she resisted the whims of mainstream audiences and the male-dominated recording industry. Mitchell's records may never have sold as widely as some of her contemporaries, but no one experimented so recklessly or so bravely explored territory outside of accepted pop music.

Often thought of as the other Mexican muralist, beside his more flamboyant compatriot Diego Rivera, Orozco was a leader of the Mexican Renaissance. His bold, dynamic frescoes had a profound impact on American painters and inspired Franklin D. Roosevelt to put artists to work during the Great Depression. His most famous U.S. murals -- The Table of Universal Brotherhood, The Epic of American Civilization and Prometheus -- still convey their power in New York, New Hampshire and California. An iconoclastic personality, Orozco survived the loss of his left hand and destruction of more than half his early work by border agents. His travels back and forth across the U.S.-Mexico border evoke the larger Mexican migrant-immigrant experience and have provocative parallels to present times.

The three-part series THE WRITING CODE examines the origin, history and craft of writing -- as both an art form and a science. Filmed in the U.S., England, Egypt, India and Iran, the programs explore writing systems from ancient Egyptian hieroglyphics to the Internet. The programs discuss literacy and the alphabet, and delve into how writing was first invented, how children learn to read and write, how Chinese writing works and what "digital" means. The series makes three major points: writing had to be invented; writing is different from speaking; and writing is the most important technology in human history.

No artist in the second half of the 20th century was more famous - or, perhaps, more famously misunderstood - than Andy Warhol. This two-part film, directed by Ric Burns, explores Warhol's astonishing artistic output - from the late 1940s to his untimely death in 1987 - paintings, drawings and photographs, films and television, books, magazines and musical performances. Set within the turbulent, changing context of his life and times, this portrait is the first to move deeply into the immense archives at the Andy Warhol Museum in Pittsburgh, the city of his humble origins. Obsessed with fame and a desire to transcend those origins, Warhol uniquely grasped the realities of modern society - the function of celebrity and of the mass media - and became the high priest of one of the most radical experiments in American culture, permanently penetrating and redefining the barrier between art and commerce.

The three-part series THE WRITING CODE examines the origin, history and craft of writing -- as both an art form and a science. Filmed in the U.S., England, Egypt, India and Iran, the programs explore writing systems from ancient Egyptian hieroglyphics to the Internet. The programs discuss literacy and the alphabet, and delve into how writing was first invented, how children learn to read and write, how Chinese writing works and what "digital" means. The series makes three major points: writing had to be invented; writing is different from speaking; and writing is the most important technology in human history.

This episode takes the notion of the three R's (reduce, reuse, recycle) to grand proportions by looking at Boston's "Big Dig" and the massive amount of waste that accompanies the $15 billion project. Paul Pedini, a civil engineer on the project, had the idea to build his own home from the Big Dig waste. The success of this project has sparked plans to create an office complex in Massachusetts from the same recycled material. These innovative projects serve as prototypes to demonstrate to city officials that there is value in recycling on such a grand level.

The three visiting plein air artists, Matt Smith, Kenn Backhaus and Jean LeGassick, travel to remote southeast Alaska to paint the Tongass Rain Forest, renowned for towering old growth cedar, hanging moss and incessant rainfall. This episode features a short demonstration by LeGassick, who proves that it takes tenacity, gear and considerable know-how to paint in a rainforest. Viewers are introduced to iconoclastic painter of Mt. McKinley, Sidney Laurence, whose paintings, created in the early 1900s, have come to epitomize the Alaska landscape. Professor Kesler Woodward examines Laurence's life and art in the context of modern times.

Have the Democrats already settled on a nominee? Maybe yes, maybe no. We'll sort it all out tonight on "Washington Week." Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) said, "When I'm president." Hillary Clinton's big week forces other candidates to redefine conventional wisdom. John Edwards said, "I've raised more money in this campaign than any candidate in 2003-2004 raised at this stage of the campaign." Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "It's the candidate who raises the most money, but a lot of times it's the candidate who has the best message and then the money follows." Is it the money or the momentum? The Democratic race heats up. The Supreme Court steps back into two touchy issues: agreeing to decide who gets to vote and how felons get to die. And at the United Nations, Iranian leader Mahmoud Ahmadinejad enrages some and confounds others. Covering the week: James Barnes of "National Journal," Jeanne Cummings of Politico, Linda Greenhouse of the "New York Times," and Barbara Slavin of "U.S.A. Today."
